

Introduction

The Resuscitation Council (UK) have identified that anaphylaxis appears to be increasingly common and is associated with a rise in allergic disease over the last two or three decades. Despite this increase, the management of anaphylaxis continues to be poor and potentially life-saving drug administration is often delayed.